

LEY'S JUNGLE WARNING TO EX-EASTENDER

Pictures: LICKERISH.BIZ

It'll end in tears, Sid

■ BACHELOR boy Sid Owen had better watch out if he plans to work his jungle magic on sizzling Kimberley Davies.

That's because the I'm A Celebrity beauty has a knack for making men cry.

Her dreamy looks may give the impression butter wouldn't melt in her mouth. But don't be fooled.

■ The former Neighbours babe, 32, has been reducing men to tears ever since she was a little girl – and her first victim was Barbie's Ken.

"When I was seven I would play Barbie and make my sister be Ken," she admits.

"I would always have a scene where I'd say to Ken, 'I'm leaving you. I don't want to be with you any more.' And he'd say, 'No, Barbie, please! I'd make him cry!'

■ But tormenting blokes wasn't just a childhood trick. The gorgeous blonde admits: "I have made a grown man cry. But it really was completely justified. He deserved to cry."

■ by KATE JACKSON

As the only single man in the Australian jungle, Tarzan wannabe Sid, 33, has already vowed to make Kimberley his "Jane".

■ But it seems that Kimberley – who played Annalise Hartman in the hit Aussie soap – might be more scary than some of the Bush Tucker Trials.

If any of her fellow contestants annoy her, she'll demonstrate some of her kickboxing moves. "Whoever I'm angry at, I imagine his head on the bag and kick the crap out of it," she admits.

■ And the other jungle contestants will be thankful they're nowhere near a road, because Kimberley says bad drivers send her "psychotic".

But at home she has a softer side and is a doting wife and mum-of-two.

■ Since leaving Neighbours in 1996, Kimberley has had bit-parts in US shows Friends and Ally McBeal. She also starred in the low-key movies Psycho Beach Party and The Shrink Is In.

Last month she returned to Erinsborough to appear with other former Neighbours favourites for the 20th anniversary celebrations.

■ And now she's battling to become Queen of the Jungle in her toughest challenge yet.

"I'm lucky that I've done a lot of camping. But I suspect nothing on the scale that I'll face in the jungle," she says.

■ And she hopes looking after two young children will have kept her fit enough to cope.

But judging by these sexy snaps, we reckon Kimberley will be sending the temperatures soaring – and not just saucy Sid's!

WHAT'S HOT TO WATCH TODAY

AFTER his jail nightmare, life can finally get back to normal for Justin Burton in HOLLYOAKS (Channel 4, 6.30pm). The only slight snag is that "normal" is pretty grim too, as we're reminded in tonight's dramatic (well, kind of) episode. His stepdad Richard is blatantly hacked off that the lad was found not guilty of murdering Ali, Richard's own son, and doesn't make a load of effort to disguise this. Richard is more interested in celebrating daughter Darlene's 19th birthday – and then announcing that he's booked a family holiday in Greece. What he doesn't realise is that his missus, Justin's mum Liz, has already packed his bags several days early. "It sickens me to even look at you," she snarls, showing him the door. "You are a pathetic, lying excuse for a man."

IT'S also a busy night in CORONATION STREET (ITV1), with no fewer than three episodes (7.30pm, 8.30pm and 10pm). The big news is that Jason and Sarah are no longer able to keep their sweaty paws off each other, despite the fact that Jason has only just got back together with the clueless Violet. Jason clearly reckons that with a bit of smart planning he can keep both women on the go, but what he doesn't realise is that Sarah's brother David, who's been in one of his more obnoxious moods since his dad bogged off to Liverpool, is about to catch them at it – and demand money to keep his gob shut.

ELSEWHERE, the latest modern-day Shakespeare revamp is THE TAMING OF THE SHREW (BBC1, 8.30pm). This one features Shirley Henderson as Kate, an MP with talent, ambition but a less than cuddly personality, plus Jaime Murray – star of Hustle and the daughter of EastEnders' Billy (who plays Johnny Allen) – as her supermodel sister.

TV GUIDE

...ON LAST NIGHT'S TV

IT'S hard to describe ROCKET MAN (Sunday, BBC1). It's got more explosions than a Hollywood blockbuster. The plots are like 'Scooby Doo', because you know that, whatever happens, every episode will end with everyone chuckling together. The characters are the sort of lovable, British eccentrics who used to fill the screens of old Ealing comedies. Every bit feels like you've seen it somewhere else before. And it's great.

This week saw obsessive inventor George Stephenson getting a little nearer to his goal of launching his wife's ashes into space. He and his team developed a tracking device – or more accurately, a pen that lit up and a frying pan mounted on a broom. But it wasn't working too well – especially when fellow rocketeer Shiner dropped it in a vat of chocolate.

Actually, the unfolding story of George's DIY rocket isn't that gripping, unless you're planning to send one of your own relatives' remains into outer space. But it's the way the rocket story slots into the troubled lives of the characters that makes it all so watchable.

Welcome

This week, the terminally-useless Shiner hit centre stage, as his debts mounted and his wife threatened to leave him. George got him a job at the chocolate factory, a chance which Shiner promptly threw away. He did a runner, intending to hurl himself off a local landmark. But luckily, he still had the rocket's tracking device in his jacket.

It all ended bit too neatly – some well-placed words from George and Shiner realised life was worth living, climbed down off the viaduct and walked straight back into his old job.

But happy endings, especially on a winter Sunday night, are welcome. Judging by the way it consistently delivers the feel-good factor, it looks like George will achieve lift-off when the show ends in a fortnight's time. Anything else would be disappointing. But it also means, thankfully, that this is going to be a one-off gem – disappearing in a blaze of glory rather than coming back year after year until we're tired of it.

Just Jane

JANE O'GORMAN SOLVES
YOUR PROBLEMS TODAY
... AND EVERY DAY

He's a food freak

MY partner's mum warned me that he was a fussy eater when we decided to move in together.

He ordered me not to cook him anything other than fish fingers, burgers and bread - and lots of it.

That's all he's eaten for three years.

It's okay when we're in the house.

But since I've been promoted at work I've started getting invited to a few posh dinners and meals at colleagues' houses.

Suddenly my fella really is a major embarrassment.

Pathetic

He's choicer than any child and I can see that people are laughing behind his back.

Suddenly I feel ashamed of him.

He simply won't try anything new and I find that so pathetic. How can I change him?

JANE SAYS: Could it be that you have actually outgrown this immature man?

Three years on and he's still making no attempt to grow up and embrace life.

I suspect that his love of fish fingers is just the tip of the iceberg. What does he think about your rising career, your ambitions or your new friends? What plans does he have to improve his life and get on in the world?

None whatsoever, I bet.

Sometimes we just have to accept that we've moved onto the next level and we have to leave the slackers behind.

DUMPED... THEN USED AS A SLUT

And all because I didn't check texts

I'M a bit of a technophobe and I've never been great at checking texts or messages on my mobile phone.

Now it's led to me being used for sex and treated like a slut.

A couple of weeks ago I went out to a party with a couple of girlfriends and I was surprised to see my boyfriend of two years there.

He'd told me he was going out with his mates to a club in the next town. I also couldn't work out why he was being so "off" with me.

He kept avoiding me and turned away when I tried to kiss him.

Fancied

Finally I grabbed a bottle of wine, filled his glass and wedged him in a corner. As the drink flowed he started to relax and soon we were kissing.

Eventually we went back to my flat where we had sex.

He got me to strip naked for him and then poured yoghurt over my bare breasts before licking it all off.

Next he tied me to my bed with silk scarves and we played a naughty game of master and servant.

It was as intense and exciting as ever and he told me I was the best.

But the next morning he couldn't get away fast enough.

A couple of hours later my mate rang my phone and I noticed that I had a number of messages.

They were all from my boyfriend - and they'd all been sent the day before. Basically, he wanted to tell me that I was history, that we were through. He said he no longer loved me and that he never wanted to see me again.

He also said I was to keep away from the previous night's party, as he fancied the hostess and was planning to get off with her. Now I just feel such a dirty, worthless idiot. I didn't even know I was dumped, yet he still used me for sex.

Predictably, he's now refusing to take my calls.

And I hear he's now with his precious hostess and they're very pleased with themselves.

JANE SAYS: You can't blame yourself for your ex-boyfriend's appalling behaviour. What kind of man dumps his girlfriend of two years by text or voicemail?

You turned up at that party in all innocence and he used you. It's not your fault for failing to listen to your messages.

How were you to know that he was capable of behaving in such an underhand and cowardly manner?

If it will make you feel any better, you could write him a stinging letter or leave a stinking message on his answer phone.

But quite honestly, I wouldn't recommend sinking to his level.

Give yourself time to be angry and grieve for the end of this relationship and then move on.

See your friends, get some exercise and rise again.

I've got a sneaking suspicion that you're better off without this rat.

PHONEY:
By the time I read my messages it was too late

I saw red at debts

I HAD no idea how much we owed until I started clearing out the spare bedroom prior to decorating it.

Suddenly I was confronted with reams of credit card bills, bank statements and final demands, all showing massive debts.

My girlfriend had been shoving the paperwork on the bed without dealing with it.

I sat down with a calculator and worked out that we are at least £12,000 in the red.

Row

That night she came home and we had a row after I accused her of being irresponsible.

Now I think we may have to sell the flat to pay off our debts. Tell me how our relationship can survive this.

JANE SAYS: I get the feeling you're trying to lay all the blame at your girlfriend's door.

Surely you're in this together? Presumably you have been spending too.

Why didn't it cross your mind to check your bank statements?

Instead of bickering, it's important that you and your girlfriend act quickly to stop the rot.

Get together every important scrap of paper and list your incomings and outgoings. Work out what you owe and to whom.

Then contact the National Debtline (0808 808 4000) or visit your local Citizens Advice Bureau for help.

Perhaps you'll have to think about remortgaging. But whatever happens, you'll both have to adopt a far more responsible attitude towards money.

Fantastic Sex

IT'S ALL OVER SO QUICKLY

I CAN only ever last two or three minutes, even when I'm on my own.

As you can imagine, this is really embarrassing and very frustrating.

I became sexually active at the age of 16 when I first started dating my girlfriend.

She and I had sex many times but it was always over very quickly.

She stayed with me for a few months but after that she found someone who could satisfy her properly. I've slept with a number of other girls since but this problem stays with me. I'm desperate to settle down and start a proper relationship but feel held back.

Is there something wrong with me?

JANE SAYS: No. The reason that most young men climax too quickly is because they are anxious, inexperienced or are having sex in a place where it's necessary to get things over with quickly. But don't worry, premature ejaculation can be easily sorted.

Get a good sex manual for tips on how to delay your climax. You will soon be sorted.
